Techsol is a self-funded company.

Profits are split between new investments into research and development, employee profit-sharing, and shareholder dividends. And most of the shareholders are also employees.

Although we are not actively seeking additional funding, it could be used very effectively for business expansion under the right conditions.

If you are an active investor with proven financial management skills, and you are willing to join a company going where no company has gone before, then let's talk.

If you represent a VC and are looking for a vehicle to hype for your next IPO, then please talk to any of the many startups eager to take your cash on any terms. We're probably not a good fit for you!
